

Dr. Christa Larsen

Christa Larsen has studied sociology, political science and economics at the Universities of Duisburg and Bielefeld, as well as at the University of Oregon (USA). In her dissertation at the University of Essen, she dealt with the development and application of multi-level models in the area of socialisation. She has long experience in research and project work in methods and statistics, and their application in the area of general and vocational education, the labour market, socialisation, gender politics and the economics of health. In the initialisation of various national and international working and research associations, she is actively involved and participates regularly on publications. She consults politicians and associations on questions of labour market monitoring and elderly care. She issues evaluations for appraising applied methodical and statistical procedures.

Christa Larsen has been employed since 2002 at IWAK, beginning as a research assistant. Since 2008, she is Managing Director of the Centre.
