Dear Colleagues and supporters of the EN RLMM,

Our network has been in existence for 15 years now. In this period, it has contributed a great deal to raise awareness and initiate action on the importance of regional and local labour market monitoring for the functioning of labour markets and for supporting economies. One of the characteristics that sets the Network apart is that through its members, it is now active in over 40 countries. Our members are engaged, directly and locally, with regional and local decision makers to develop and implement customized approaches to monitoring, fitted for regional and, often even, local conditions. Through the Network, these Bottom-Up approaches are bundled together and, through this overview, several impulses and concepts for further development are provided for other Regions and Localities. The Network survives as a non-profit organisation exclusively through the commitment and engagement of its members. Fifteen years existence clearly demonstrates the significant political and economic meaning of the field of regional and local labour market monitoring.

We are confident that we can continue to develop the concept and practise of regional and local labour market monitoring in good and constructive cooperation over the next 15 years.

Dr Christa Larsen,
Coordinator of the EN RLMM

Professor Marco Ricceri,
Head of the Scientific Committee

EN RLMM

The European Network on Regional Labour Market Monitoring (EN RLMM) focuses on innovative approaches for the monitoring of labour markets in regions and localities across Europe.

Through various activities involving the publishing of Anthologies and organising meetings, it seeks to further the concepts and instruments in regional and local labour market monitoring and to diffuse the common methods for research and analysis in this field.

In 2020, the Annual Meeting of the EN RLMM will be the first one that will take place virtually. It will be organised jointly by EURIPSES in Rome, Italy and the Co-ordination/Management of the EN RLMM at IWAK from the Goethe-University of Frankfurt am Main, Germany.

Big Data Working Group

Big Data, especially from the internet, as a source for data provision in regional and local labour market monitoring, is of growing importance.

The Big Data Working Group is preparing a Big Data Knowledge Hub to support network members in applying big data by providing information and practices on methods, quality criteria, areas of application and data sets.

A prototype of the Knowledge Hub will be presented on the European Day, the second day of our meeting (18th September 2020).

The Importance of SMEs as Innovators of Sustainable Inclusive Employment in Times of Pandemic and Beyond.
New Evidence from Regional and Local Labour Markets

The virtual Conference of the EN RLMM will have two parts:

Annual Meeting (17th September 2020)

The topic of EN RLMM in 2020 is related to the innovative potentials of SMEs in securing employment in regions and localities and their impulses for the transformation of economy. There will be a special focus on the mechanisms of SMEs in handling the pandemic.

In our discussions we will learn about innovative approaches to human resource management and training in SMEs and to the gains of their integration into local and regional support structures and policy frameworks. Our special interest is related to understanding the mechanisms to withstand the pandemic and support the transformation of the economy.

European Day (18th September 2020)

Traditionally we focus at the European Day on the practices of the regional and local labour market observatories. As the observatories are of major importance for the provision of transparency in regions and localities during the pandemic and beyond, we will discuss in how far they can support evidence-based policy making and how the EN RLMM can support their practices.

Overview of the Working Groups on 17 September 2020

Working Group 1

Success Factors of SMEs – Structures, Processes, and Cultures

Moderators/Presenters:

Professor Mattia Martini, University of Milano-Bicocca (Italy)

Dr Moreno Baruffini, Università della Svizzera italiana, USI (Switzerland)

The discussion of the working group deals with the core question, which structures, processes, and, above all, the company cultures contribute to SMEs being able to secure employment during and after the pandemic and what this means for regional and local labour market monitoring.

Working Group 2

Relevance of VET and Employability for Innovation in SMEs - Forms and Applications

Moderators/Presenters:

Dr Aline Valette-Wursthén, Céreq (France)

Piirita Vuorinen, ETF—European Training Foundation (Italy)

How do qualifications and the security of employability in SMEs take place? The working group discusses environmental and operational factors as well as implications for the further development of the VET division and the consideration of these subject areas in regional and local labour market monitoring.

Working Group 3

Supporting the transformation of SMEs by Digitalisation - Chances and Challenges

Moderators/Presenters:

Professor Ciprian Panzaru, West University of Timisoara (Romania)

Professor Mario Mezzanzanica, University of Milano-Bicocca (Italy)

Digitisation is less advanced in SMEs than in large companies. It is to be discussed which factors and strategies can support further digitisation and how the experience of the pandemic can be useful for the digitisation.

Working Group 4

Fostering the Transformation of SMEs by Local/Regional Policy Frameworks and Support Structures - Chances and Challenges

Moderators/Presenters:

Dr Andrew Dean, University of Exeter (United Kingdom)

Daniel Porep, Economic Development Agency Brandenburg (Germany)

With often limited resources, SMEs can be very dependent on stimuli and interventions from local and regional support structures. This virtual Working Group will discuss the type(s) of support that are particularly relevant to promoting the innovation potential of SMEs and how the necessary regional and local policy frameworks and structures can be built.

SCIENTIFIC COMMITTEE

Overview of the Working Groups on 18 September 2020

Working Group 1

Practices of Regional and Local Labour Market Observatories in times of pandemic—Need for provision of real time information and accessing new user groups?

Moderators/Presenters:

Claudia Plaimauer, 3s Consulting (Austria)

Michel von Smoorenburg, UWV — Public Employment Services (Netherlands)

The following questions will be discussed: How can observatories provide real time information to monitor the impact of the pandemic on regional and local labour markets? Are new user groups needed, which are necessary for the transformation process and which should receive the information from the observatories?

Working Group 2

The Relevance of Observatories in evidence based policy making in local and regional support for Economic Transformation — Current Successful Approaches and Prospective Steps.

Moderators/Presenters:

Professor Ronald W. McQuaid, University of Stirling's Management School (United Kingdom)

Professor Vyacheslav Bobkov, Russian Academy of Science Moscow, (Russia) (not confirmed)

The discussion will revolve around the following topics: How can policy makers and other key decision-makers in the regional and local labour markets better recognise that the observatories can provide them with constant transparency on developments? Which strategies are expedient here to optimise the interface between observatories and policy makers? Framework conditions at higher levels can also be considered relevant.

Working Group 3

Building a support structure for (geographical isolated) Observatories by the EN RLMM— Needs and Strategies.

Moderators/Presenters:

Nina Oding, Leontief Center St Peterburg (Russia)

Anna Grochowska, Regional Labour Office in Warsaw/ Mazovian Labour Market Observatory (Poland)(not confirmed)

Many observatories are still very isolated, especially in countries without a systematic and nationwide structure. Therefore, it will be discussed how our network can support these observatories so that they play an important role in the pandemic and economic transformation. Against this background, how can the Initiative of our network for networking regional and local labour market observatories across Europe be further developed?
